Dear Members, Contacts and Friends of ISO,

Even a global pandemic cannot stop ISO from offering you the most prevailing and valuable information on what moves the world of sugar. Covid-19 and climate change are as short- and long-term challenges the centrepieces of the 29th ISO International Seminar held on 24 & 25 of November.

Given the current situation of the pandemic and the measures imposed by the UK government, we have developed a 'hybrid event' combining live presentations and discussions with online contributions by renowned speakers in a fluid manner.

You will be enabled to actively participate in the seminar and to intervene in the discussions. We feel obliged to focus as always on delivering solid content and to strive to keep everyone engaged yet safe.

We firmly believe that in times like these, it is more crucial than ever to generate an open forum to address the priorities of our sector. The seminar's goal is to enrich our understanding and to strengthen our ability to tackle the challenges ahead with sound strategies and well-drafted policies.

As such, we encourage you to register and to attend. We welcome your active participation; relevance is the goal and the proactive presence of all the stakeholders in our sugar family is key to produce tangible results.

Please find registration documents attached.

We look forward to seeing you at the 29th International ISO seminar!

Best Regards,

José Orive
