

CIS Sugar Market 2017

on the way to self-sufficiency

VI joint conference of International Sugar Organization and Eurasian Sugar Association

16 March 2017 • Moscow • Radisson Slavyanskaya

Major producing countries in the region are likely to become net-exporters, reducing needs of sugar-deficit countries in imports from the world market

The place of CIS region on the world sugar map has been changing dramatically – since 2010 sugar production has increased by nearly 70% up to 9 mln t. Domestic output covers more than 90% of demand and the region is on the verge of self-sufficiency

Sugar industry expansion in the region has not attracted so far massive foreign investment... but doors are open

CIS Sugar Market 2017

on the way to self-sufficiency

Organizers

The International Conference «The CIS Sugar Market» will take place for the 6th time in Moscow in March 2017.

This is the only event in the sugar calendar focusing on the Eurasian Community (EAEC) providing a comprehensive update on the major drivers and challenges for a market consuming more than 9 mln tonnes of sugar a year.

Each year this event brings about 300 delegates representing leading companies involved in beet and cane growing, sugar processing and trading, as well as companies providing beet seeds, pesticides, fertilizers and agricultural machinery, logistical and insurance support to the sugar industry.

2017 is expected to be a challenging year for many in the sugar world – despite the global deficit and seemingly remunerative for exporters level of world prices, the industry has to focus on further improvements in efficiency and lowering production costs along the whole chain from crop growing to sugar and by-products marketing and distribution.

New challenges worldwide, in general, and in the CIS countries, in particular, include likely modifications in regional trade flows. With some radical changes in the EU sugar regime a significant increase in the bloc's white sugar exports is widely expected.

Will sugar from Russia and Belarus be competitive against sugar from Western Europe in Asia? Will Ukraine manage to increase its deliveries to the EU? Can the EAEC countries be successful in their efforts to resuscitate beet selection and domestic beet seed production? What are the challenges and rewards for foreign investors in the sugar sector in the CIS countries?

These are the main topics to be addressed by authoritative international and domestic speakers.

The conference will have simultaneous interpretation into English and Russian. The cost for participants includes the conference material, lunch and refreshments during coffee breaks.
